"Is this child ready to begin school?"

Specifically designed for professionals and parents concerned with the question, "Is this child ready to begin school?", the Kindergarten Readiness Test -Larson (KRT LARSON) is an assessment tool developed to measure a child's functioning through 25 various developmental tasks. The KRT LARSON consolidates critical areas of developmental tests into one single form, making identification of school readiness more efficient and valid.

Using state-of-the-art child development theories and test design, the KRT LARSON is sensitive to current state and federal laws regulating school readiness. A majority of children will successfully complete most of the measured tasks if their levels of maturity and development are falling within ranges of the typical later-four, five, and six year old children who are entering kindergarten classes.

Five General Assessed Skills of the KRT LARSON Task Items:

- Understanding, Awareness, and Interactions with One's Environment
- Judgement and Reasoning in Problem Solving
- Numerical Awareness
- Visual and Fine-Motor Coordination
- Auditory Attention Span/Concentration

Tasks are presented in a sequential developmental-maturational format. Each Test Booklet has additional forms to help enhance parent conferences, graphically depict a child's strength and weaknesses, and has been used to identify possible handicap conditions at an early age. The KRT LARSON includes Scoring Interpretation forms on a tear-off pad, making it easy to provide a copy of the child's results to the parent(s).

To aid examiners in interpreting readiness levels of children to parents, the KRT LARSON includes four ranges of performance.

Four Ranges of Performance:

Above Average..... 100-92%
Average..... 90-78%
Lower Average 76-63%
Below Average/
Questionable Readiness..... 61-45%
and below
